You are invited to join The American Iris Society, a non-profit organization of iris enthusiasts. The AIS encourages the cultivation, appreciation and improvement of this lovely and diverse group of plants through education, exhibitions, field explorations, and gardening activities featuring irises. New AIS members receive the AIS publication Basic Iris Culture, an informative booklet that provides useful guidelines for successful iris growing. AIS Members also receive a quarterly publication, the AIS Bulletin. Each issue of the AIS Bulletin provides approximately 100 pages of fresh information on iris culture, an array of color photographs of both old and new irises, and an advertising directory of commercial iris growers located throughout the United States. The AIS Storefront is a member service from which AIS publications, such as The World of Irises, and other AIS sale items may be purchased at attractive prices. A Storefront merchandise menu is published in each AIS Bulletin and on our website www.irises.org/storefront.htm. As an AIS member you will be able to learn about and to participate in a wide range of activities and programs:

- The AIS Judges' Training program
 - The AIS Youth program
 - Regional and local affiliate activities.
- The AIS is divided into 24 regions. AIS Members are automatically members in the AIS Region local to them. Regional membership brings members current local information via the regional publication.
- Special interest Sections - Dwarf, Historic, Median, Japanese, Pacific Coast Native, Reblooming, Siberian, Species, and Spuria - these specialty iris groups offer many additional opportunities to increase your iris IQ.
 - AIS Internet Services provide members access to cultivar information and other uniquely internet activities that cater to computer literate iris enthusiasts.
 - We invite those who enjoy the technology of computers and the Internet to visit our web page at www.irises.org and the AIS Storefront located at www.irises.org/storefront.htm. The Storefront offers a variety of iris motif items and discounts to AIS members.
