You are invited to join the American Iris Society (AIS), a non-profit organization of iris enthusiasts.

The AIS encourages the cultivation, appreciation and improvement of this lovely and diverse group of plants through education, exhibitions, field explorations, and gardening activities featuring irises. New AIS members receive the AIS publication Basic Iris Culture, an informative booklet that provides useful guidelines for successful iris growing. AIS Members also receive a quarterly publication, the AIS Bulletin. Each issue of the AIS Bulletin provides approximately 100 pages of fresh information on iris culture, an array of color photographs of both old and new irises and an advertising directory of commercial iris growers located throughout the United States/Canada. The AIS Storefront is a member service from which AIS publications and other AIS specific items may be purchased at attractive prices. A Storefront merchandise menu is published in each AIS Bulletin and also on the AIS website.

As an AIS member you will have opportunities to learn all about irises and participate in a wide range of activities and programs:

- The AIS Judges' Training program
- The AIS Youth program
- Regional and local affiliate activities. The AIS is divided into 22 regions. AIS Members are automatically members in the AIS Region that is local to them. Regional membership brings members current local contacts and information via the regional publication.
- Special interest Sections - Dwarf, Historic, Median, Japanese, Pacific Coast Native, Reblooming, Siberian, Species, and Spuria - these specialty iris groups offer many additional opportunities to increase your iris IQ.
- AIS Internet Services provide members access to the AIS website including an AIS Emembership option and other unique internet activities/services that cater to computer oriented iris enthusiasts.
- We invite those who enjoy the technology of computers and the internet to visit our AIS website at www.irises.org for items such as; history, current news, events info, award announcements and detailed information regarding almost every aspect of the American Iris Society. You may also use the options provided on the AIS website to either join or renew your membership online.
