The Second Photographic Competition of "THE IRIS WORLD"

Theme

The Iris has become a symbol of royalty since the man saw its rainbow-colored beauty, it's a sign of faith, bravery, wisdom and brightness.

Anselm was running around the green garden. Among all of his mum's flowers, there was this one flower that was named Iris and he liked it very much. He brought one of his cheek to the long light green leaves, he run his fingers over the sharp edges, he took a deep breath of the perfume of the splendid corollas, he looked inside inside of the flower. From the blue-ish bottom of it some yellow fingers raised, and between them a lighter path was sinking in the goblet and in the distant, light blue secret of the flower. He really like it; he kept staring at it for hours and hours, and the thin yellow pistils looked like the golden bush in the king's garden. There was an endless warp, and on a side the path got lost among the golden trees, it sank in the infinity in an endless water well, upon which a light purple colored dome it arched royally, where light shadows lay on a marvelous silent wait.
